PROFESSIONAL SUMMARY

Qualified dentist (BDS) with four years in intake and coordination roles, which is the pairing an intake desk actually runs on: someone who understands the clinical side of a referral and can still work a queue to a deadline. In practice I took referrals in both directions, prepared specialist referrals with the supporting notes and followed each one until the patient was seen, took histories, verified patient details and explained what came next to patients and to the family member sitting beside them. In operations I have owned registration and intake for a fee-paying center and now handle documentation, external approvals and a phone and email queue for 500+ people, all against defined response times. Confidential records are ordinary work for me, not a new discipline. I am fast on new platforms, I chase open cases to closure rather than logging them, and I am set up to cover a full U.S. shift from a private home office.

CORE SKILLS

Referral & New Client Intake: Taking a new case from first contact to an open, complete record: collecting history and demographics through structured questions, checking nothing is missing before it reaches a clinician, and moving the case forward the same day. I ran registration, intake and onboarding for a fee-paying center and redesigned the intake workflow itself, which cut record errors and shortened response times. On the clinical side I prepared specialist referrals with the supporting documentation and followed each one until the patient was actually seen, which is the same chase an intake desk runs on referral sources.

Client, Family & Care Team Communication: High-volume inbound and outbound calls alongside email, with nothing left sitting unanswered. Warm, clear written and spoken English, and the habit of explaining a plan, a cost or a next step in words the client and the family will actually understand. Comfortable with distressed, elderly or reluctant callers without rushing them, and practiced at holding the line between a client, a clinician and an outside organization so none of the three has to chase the other.

Insurance Verification & Authorizations: Verification and approval work is what I already do daily: I prepare and check supporting documentation, submit it to external providers and authorities, track each case through review and chase it to approval rather than waiting on it. Eligibility checks, prior authorization and claim follow-up run on the same document, submission and chase logic. I also ran payment tracking for a fee-paying center, including collecting outstanding balances and reconciling accounts, so the money side of a new case is familiar ground.

Scheduling, Assessments & Follow-Up: Owning a live calendar end to end: bookings, confirmations, assessments, cancellations, clashes and rescheduling, all handled the same day. In clinical practice proactive confirmation and recall was the single biggest lever on both no-show rate and whether patients completed their course of care, so I treat the schedule as clinical work rather than clerical work. Comfortable coordinating several clinicians, visits and time zones at once.

Records, Documentation & Confidentiality: BDS-qualified and practiced: medical terminology, anatomy and physiology, medication names and dosing, prescription and pharmacy workflows, referral pathways and consent. I charted findings and wrote clinical notes for a full daily caseload, so I can follow a clinician at speed without asking them to repeat the basics, and I can tell when a note does not make clinical sense. Records kept complete, consistent and audit-ready, and patient confidentiality treated as a standing obligation, which is what HIPAA formalizes.

Systems, Tools & Remote Working: Advanced Microsoft Excel, Microsoft Office and Google Workspace; CRM and ticketing queues; cloud phone and video-visit workflows; confident moving between several platforms at once. Quick to master CareCloud, RingCentral and similar patient-management and cloud telephony platforms, which run on the record, scheduling and call-queue logic I already work in daily. I write the SOPs and train colleagues whenever a new system lands. Private home office, high-speed fiber with a backup connection and power backup, HD webcam and headset. English (fluent), Arabic (native), German (conversational).

WORK EXPERIENCE

Operations and Support Specialist

Property Shop Investment (PSI) | Abu Dhabi, UAE | May 2025 - Present

- First point of contact for 500+ people: intake of new requests, inquiries and problems across phone, chat and email throughout the shift, most resolved the same day.
- Own confidential documentation end to end, preparing, verifying and organizing records and catching errors before they reach anyone else.
- Coordinate with external providers and government authorities on approvals, authorizations and renewals, following each case through review to completion.
- Work across CRM, portals, Excel, cloud drives and internal tools simultaneously to triage and resolve cases at first contact wherever possible.
- Write the SOPs and train colleagues whenever a new system or process is introduced.
- Built an automated reminder service that alerts colleagues before documents expire, plus the daily reporting management uses.

Operations and Program Coordinator

EL-Feky Educational Center | Tanta, Egypt | Jan 2023 - Jan 2025

- Owned registration, intake and onboarding for every new client, and was first line for inquiries and complaints in person and by phone.
- Ran the daily appointment calendar: bookings, cancellations, clashes and rescheduling, all handled the same day.
- Owned payment tracking: collected outstanding balances, reconciled accounts and followed up on overdue payments.
- Redesigned and documented the intake workflow, which cut record errors and shortened response times.

Operations and Marketing Assistant (Part-time)

EL-Feky Educational Center | Tanta, Egypt | Mar 2022 - Sep 2023

- Handled inbound inquiries and structured follow-up, and kept contact and account records accurate at volume.

General Dentist

Harmony Dental Clinic | Tanta, Egypt | Apr 2021 - Dec 2022

- Practicing clinician with a full daily caseload: history taking, examination, diagnosis, treatment planning, treatment and aftercare.
- Prepared specialist referrals with supporting documentation and followed up to confirm patients were seen, and took referred patients in from other practices.
- Charted findings and wrote up clinical notes for every patient, keeping records complete, consistent and confidential.
- Coordinated prescriptions with pharmacies and raised and tracked lab work through to delivery.
- Scheduled appointments and recalls, confirmed attendance, and cut no-shows through proactive follow-up.
- Explained diagnoses, options and costs in plain language to patients and to accompanying family members, and handled the billing conversation directly.
